President Stresses CIA Task In Cornerstone Ceremony

LANGLEY, Va., Nov. 3 (UPI).
PRESIDENT EISENHOWER laid the cornerstone for the Central Intelligence Agency's new headquarters today. He said no task could be more important than CIA's job of gathering information to help the United States preserve peace.

In a brief dedication speech, Mr. Eisenhower said the agency's reputation for quality and excellence is a proud one. He told CIA officials that "upon the quality of your work depends in large measure the success of our effort to further the nation's position in the international scene."

The President drove here from the White House before flying to Gettysburg to cast his vote in the Pennsylvania state election. Allen W. Dulles, director of the CIA and brother of the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, said the agency's task was to "assure ourselves," through accurate intelligence, that our attachments to policies are soundly based."

The 140-acre site of the new building is about eight miles from downtown Washington.
